Love thy neighbor

Last month I spoke about my next door neighbors the electrician and the floor and carpet guy. Just the fact I have an electrician, handyman and painter as neighbors has been a huge blessing. I have already used each one of them for various projects around the house. This past month I was intentional about fostering a relationship with my other neighbor across the street who is a house painter. A few months back, my wife won a prize drawing from our realtor friend for $500 off house painting. It just so happened to be our neighbor across the streets painting company! When he came over to talk to us about the work, we ended up having a great conversation about what work I do and what brought us to Colorado. When I told him our story, he had a lot of questions for me. He told me his story of growing up going to church with his mother and grandmother. He said he knows he needs to be in a church and definitely believes in God but he had a very bad experience with the pastor. He said he can't get past that experience, and no offense to me but he does not trust "church pastors" because they are fake and live one way in front of the congregation and another in their personal lives. I told him I completely understood his situation and that is a very personal pet peeve of mine also. I also told him I would love to have him and his kids come over one night for dinner and maybe watch some football together so he could see for himself what kind of people we are. He thought that would be a good idea and he is supposed to let me know the days he has his kids so we can plan something. Please pray for Tony. Pray he would feel like we are people he can relate to and start to trust so that we can move on into more serious conversations about his eternal life and life here on earth. I do believe he is open, it is just going to take time and consistency to win his trust.

A few months back I had a long conversation with the local Jehova's witnesses who came to my house door knocking. We talked theology and scripture for over an hour. When I told them I had an appointment and needed to go, they asked if it would be ok to stop back by another time. I told them I would be happy to talk more. They have since been by 3 more times. Each time they had more questions for me than I did for them. They said they appreciated that a "Baptist preacher" would sit and talk to them. They said that was very rare. They said they also appreciated how everything I said I believed I could point to scripture to back up my point. During our conversations, I do believe the TRUTH was planted in their hearts and they were starting to question some of their own beliefs. The reason I can say that is because last week I got a knock on the door and it was 2 different guys. They asked if I was Pastor Jack. I said yes and asked how they knew that. They said the previous 2 guys had been transferred to another location and they were their replacements. They said the previous young men had left them instruction and notes about our visits and that they need to come see me because I was kind to them yet asked very pointed and serious questions that made them want to search the scriptures and find answers for themselves. I was actually headed out when they came buy so I gave them my card and said I cannot talk now but would love to sit down with them. They called and said they would be back in my area the end of next week and wanted to come by. Please pray for the previous 2 young men that if they are seeking the truth God will reveal it to them and please pray I can have the same impact on the 2 new young men.
