Summer is drawing to a close

Summer is coming to a close, and everyone is trying to get their last minute trips in before school starts here in mid August. Because of this, our attendance has been down the last few weeks. Last week we knew everyone would be gone so we took the opportunity to attend the Taylor's Bible study at their home in Longmont. We had a wonderful service and a great time of fellowship. We were able to sit and talk with them about what has and has not worked with us and get some suggestions moving forward. We also discussed how we could help each other minister to the Longmont and Mead communities. The Taylors just signed a lease on a building that will be used in many different ways and I will be helping out in several of those ministries to better saturate myself in the community. They should have the building ready the 2nd week of August. I am really looking forward to the opportunities God is going to give us in this endeavor.

As far as our ministry, I have met with a couple of families I have been working on for quite some time. The father of one of the families is finishing up his doctorate from the University of Auburn and he travels there 1 week a month then attends on-line classes the rest of the month. He is part of a study group that meets on Sundays. Fortunately, this is a summer program and he will be finished the 1st week of August. He indicated he would like for him and his family to start attending once he is finished. His wife is a teacher at the High School and I have invited them to come one Sunday so we could have a special time of prayer for her and all the teachers and students this coming year. The other family is a couple I met at the gym I am working out at. They both said they would be open to visiting our Bible study. They are believers but have not been in church for quite some time because they said they couldn't find a church they like.

I will also be volunteering with the unified athletic program for special needs at the High School. The Unified program helps special needs young men and women learn a variety of sports and compete against other high school unified programs in the district

Thank you for all the prayers and support for me while I have been recovering from my rotator cuff injury and surgery. I have officially been cleared to return to "a normal life." I joined a gym a week ago to try and get back in shape and lose some weight. I have met many people there and have been able to introduce myself and share my story. So far most have been receptive and even curious. Please pray God will enrich this opportunity to further His kingdom and as a bonus I can get back into shape physically.
