Summer

It seems like the summer months go by so fast because we are always so busy. This summer has been no exception. We started off going to California for my son's graduation from Junior college to bringing him home for a few weeks before we had to move him to Alamosa, Colorado to attend Adams State University. In between all that, the town Of Mead has "summer movie night" once a month, and I have been volunteering with the setup and have a booth for the church.

My daughter has been in summer weights/conditioning for her HS volleyball team most of the summer. Because so many girls were on vacation. And could make it to "Breakfast and the Bible," I took the opportunity to go to them with breakfast burritos. I took breakfast burritos to one of her early morning practices and explained it was from the church. I was able to briefly explain who we were and tell about our Bible Study times.

Our attendance has remained steady, and we have picked up 3-4 people who attend Bible Study via zoom. My son's girlfriend has been very faithful in attending from her home in Laguna Beach. Also, my son has a football friend of his from Fullerton, CA who also received a scholarship offer to play football at Adams State. They are now roommates, and He has been attending via zoom. When I was helping them move, he asked what I did for a living, and I told him. He said "awesome! I am Seventh day Adventist, but I has SO many questions!" We talked about the Sabbath, and the OT among a bunch of other subjects. He said he had a very strict upbringing (he lives in the Bronx, about 2 blocks from Yankee stadium!) He said he loves Jesus and knows him as his savior and went to a Christian school and church all the time while growing up in Ghana, Africa. He said it got to the point where it was not enjoyable because of all the rules and regulations he had to follow, he said it was mainly from OT rules. He has a lot of questions we talk about.

Hopefully in July, we can resume our "breakfast and the Bible" when more girls are back from vacation.
